

so actor was just a person who liked acting, seemed confident energetically moving around like he was in front of an audience, he constantly had a grim smile though which was why the other characters thought he was evil in some way all other than depression, Actor since he could act very well whenever he'd get mad he'd make the same serious face that depression made because he thought it was the most threatening to scare them off because he didn't want to hurt anyone

One day after being blamed again he stopped hiding his anger and told them what he felt like and that he wasn't behind the voices and the clone fighting crap the inner demon was pulling

He was insecure and felt like he had no control

Which made him the closest to depression of all

Now that I think about it... I should've drawn Depression and Actor combined

Because if Depression can combine with anyone he'd do it with the closest person to his personality and level of suffering right?